If implemented in your system with a console setup, a dispatcher can make a special call to a target device to listen to conversations and background noises within the range of a particular device's microphone. The target device receives no indication that the Ambient Listening (AL) assignment has been activated, and may take priority over ongoing voice or PTT calls.

The AL listeners receive an indication  on the device screen an AL assignment has been started. Based on your system administrator's device configuration, an AL device can be an:

- Ambient Listener - a listener (for example, console or privileged user) who is ambience listening to the target device when an AL call is initiated.
- Ambient Target - a target device that is required to send microphone audio back to the console user and AL listeners when a call is initiated.

The call ends when the LEX device user initiates any voice call, switches to Emergency, or sends an Emergency Alarm.
